How did Oakland County evolve from a sparsely populated agrarian community to a diversified powerhouse of a county with more than 1 million residents?

Some of the answers can be found in
The History of Oakland County (1877).

Local historian Jim Craft will use the book as a springboard to take us on a trip through the County's history. He will present a reprinted edition of the book that the Oakland County Historical Commission is donating to local libraries and historical societies in honor of the County's 200th birthday.

Jim earned BA and MA degrees in history and speaks widely on a variety of interesting subjects — you'll surely enjoy this presentation on Oakland County!
